

Rohrbeck Heger
strategic foresight + innovation

Foresight Analyst

SUMMARY OF POSITION

We're looking for an ambitious Foresight Analyst to help us provide valuable foresight solutions for some of the world's leading organizations.

Analysts play a key role in trend scouting, analysis and interpretation, and developing insights about future opportunities for our clients. As part of a forward-thinking, highly-motivated and international team of consultants and analysts you will apply innovation and foresight methods, implement and integrate practices into our clients' business units, strategy and R&D departments.

KEY TASKS & RESPONSIBILITIES

- Conduct and manage research and analyses, develop hypotheses, formulate insightful and actionable recommendations for clients in different industries
- Scan for trends, technologies and emerging business models
- Apply a generalist, lateral view for developing long-term outlooks and an expert, in-depth view for short-term analyses and forecasts of newly identified trends, technologies and business models
- Dive into new topics, themes and industries to synthesize comprehensive, yet lean overviews and summaries thereof
- Apply existing techniques and methodologies related to the foresight domain such as scenario analysis, roadmapping and backcasting workshops

REQUIRED QUALIFICATIONS & EXPERIENCE

- 3-5 years of work experience – ideally within a strategy or innovation management consulting firm – in strategy, innovation, technology development and/or as analyst or researcher
- Proficient methodological background in strategy, corporate foresight / future studies, innovation management
- Superior communication skills – verbally and in writing – for presenting new topics to senior management
- Capable of abstraction, systems-level thinking, and in-depth analyses in domains new to the person
- Generalist across domains and industries for detecting opportunities and developing long-term future outlooks
- Language skills: English required, German or other languages are a plus
